#LawNeedsFeminismBecause

we had to start this initiative

Rachel Kohut

Researcher, Activist, and
#LawNeedsFeminismBecause
Innovator

The Importance of Stories in Legal Education and Practice: From Midwifery in the Arctic to #LawNeedsFeminismBecause

Monday September 25, 2017

1-2:30 pm

Robert Sutherland Hall,

Room 202 (light lunch)

Followed by Queen's Women & Law
#LawNeedsFeminismBecause photoshoot

Rachel Kohut is a researcher interested in the intersection of law, gender, and health.

She has held positions in the United Nations Development Program, Canadian HIV/ AIDS Legal Network, Center for Reproductive Rights, and International Development Research Center.

Rachel Kohut is a law student at McGill University and holds a Masters of Public Health from Memorial University. She has presented her research findings on maternal health at conferences held in various places including Queen's University, and Tromsø, Norway. She invented the viral twitter trend #LawNeedsFeminismBecause. She blogs at http://www.rachelkohut.com/

Come Find Your Edge